A LADY CUT IN TWAIN.

SAD ACCIDENT TO A CARRIAGE LOAD OF YOUNG LADIES.

Miss Oppenheimer, of Pittsburg, Killed and Two or Three Others More or Less Injured at Harmony-John Bredin, Son of Judge Bredin, Falls from a Bridge and Drowned-Futile Lilorts to

Pittsburg, July 24.—Miss Oppenheimer, daughter of M. Oppenheimer, the well-known Liberty street clothier, and a prominent Hebrew society belle of Allegheny, was killed at Harmony, Butler county, Tuesday. Miss Opponheimer and several friends were on a vacation, and the news of her sudden and distressing death, which was announced in a telegram, was a painful shock to her many acquaintances. It appears that Miss Oppenheimer, in company with Miss Kiee, Miss Floersheim, Miss Frey and Mrs. Herzog, was riding in a wagon. The country road on which the wagon was standing is about four feet above the railroad and in endeavoring to drive the horse the young lady who was holding the reins began to pull on them instead of whipping up the horse. The awful result was that the animal backed the wagon over the bank just as the train reached that point. Several cars had passed by this time and the end of the wagon was struck by a car near the middle of the trum. The collision threw Miss Oppenheimer out of the wagon between two cars and she fell on the track. Ten cars passed over her breast, cutting her almost in twain, and also cutting of her right arm, killing her instantly, as a matter of course. The other young ladies were thrown against the bank and none received any more serious injury than severe bruises except Miss Klee, who had a leg broken, but Mr. Austin Pierce, of this city, who was an eye-witness of the horror, says that it is almost miraculous that all were not killed. The wagon was smashed to splinters and the horse, which was thrown under the cars, was cut to

AN UNTIMELY END.

John Fredm. Son of Judge Bredin, Falls

from a Bridge and is Drowned. Pritsburg, July 24.—John Bredin, aged 30 years, son of Judge Bredin, of Union avenue, Allegbeny, was drowned in the Allegbeny river shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday morning. The young man had been drinking to excess, and about I o'clock was observed by the toilkeeper of the Ninth street bridge crossing over the structure to this city. He started to retrace his steps, but on meeting a man standing in the entrance of the bridge he turned back to a house on Ninth street, where he laid down on the steps. Shortly afterwards he arose and started to cross the bridge. When he had reached the second pair from this side of the river the toll-keeper saw him stop and commence climbing up the railing. He told a man who was at the toll house to run out, but before the unfortunate young man could be reached ie had plunged into the river. The man saw him struggling in the water and called to him to keep up until he could reach him in a skiff. Bredin made no reply, but when the man reached the place where he was he had disappeared. Men in boats were out all day searching for the body, and although the river at that point is not very deep, the body had not been recovered up to an early hour Wednesday morning. It is generally believed that the body has been carried down stream by the current. The young man's friends have no idea that he intended committing suicide.

Slate Roofers Denied a Charter. CHICAGO, July 24.—The executive board of the Knights of Labor will finish their session in this city to-day. So far as can be learned the work of the board during the week it has been in session has resulted in few surprises and little besides the issuing of new charters and other routine business. During yesterday's session the board decided to sustain the seamen's union of Oswego, N. Y., in their fight with the vessel owners' association at that place. A petition from a number of slate roofers at Pittsburg, asking for a district charter, was refused, the board being of the opinion that the petitioners were non-union men who had taken the places of union men while the latter were out on a strike, and now attempted to fortify their position and constitute themselves, if possible, Knights in good standing. The members of the board all denied emphatically the report that District Assembly No. 49, of New York, as in danger of dissolution, and claim it is in a more satisfactory condition than ever before.

Making Excellent Progress.

Stoux Fairs, S. D., July 21.-The South Daltota convention yesterday made excellent progress in passing uponthe different articles that had been reported by the several committees. The convention adopted articles embracing the following topics: Impearlment and removal from office, election and right of suffrage state institutions and public buildings, exemptions, banking an ecurreney, seal and cont of arms, military affairs, courty and township organization, the actibles on executive and administrates and the eath of office. The commutee a part that the convention could not provide for exemption of Mennomits from mobbury duty, was adopted as was a memoral to congress asking tor geological and hydrographical survey of South Dakota. The most important report made was that on judiciary, which gave reasons for increasing the number of judicial districts from six to eight, and their defined the eight districts. The report also included all the court machinery as provided in the Sioux Falls constitution.

KEMMLER'S CASE.

Thomas A. Edison Testifies That 1,000 Volts Will Cause Instantaneous Death.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Thomas A. Edison, the "Wizard of Menlo Park," came before Referee Becker in the Kemmler reference to testify as to the probabilities of electricity in its application as a death-dealing force. Mr. Edison said that for twerty-six years he had been actively interested in the workings of electricity, and considered lamself very well acquimted with dynamos. On Saturday, hearing that he would probably so called to testily in the case, he experimented on 250 of his workmen with the view of ascertaining their resistances. He found that the average measurement was 1,000 ohms, the resistances exhibited varying from 660 to 1,800 ohms. He heard of tests that proved that some parts of the oody exhibite l a resist mee of 200,060 ohms, and he did not doubt it in the least. A burn was conclusive evidence that the contact was imperfect and that very little current passed through the body. "I have come to the conclusion," said Mr. Edison, "that 1,000 volts will cause instantaneous and painless death. If Mr. Smith, who stated that he had experienced a shock of 1.500 volts without serious injury, will come over to my laboratory and successfully withstand a shock of 100 volts 1 will give him 8100." In his experiments on his workmen. Mr. Edison found that eight volts of alternating current was all they cared to try.

In the Cross-examination, Mr. Edison testified respecting the Westinghouse machines and admitted that it was based on behef. A. E. Kennedy, one of Mr. Edison's electricians, next testified. He believed 1,000 volts was enough to cause death in ad cases. The hearing will probably be concluded to-day.

The Production of Fig Iron.

PHEADTIMES, July 21.—The American been and Steel association has collected complete statistics of the production of all kinds of pig iron in the United States for the first six months of 1889; also statistics of the stocks of unsold pig iron in the hands of manufacturers on June 30 last and of the number of turbaces in blast and out of blast at that date. The production of pig in the first half of 1850 is the largest in any six months in the history of the American iron trade. The stocks of unsold pig June 30 were much larger than at the close of any semi-annual period for a number of years. The total American production of pig for the period named was 4,107,895 net tons of 2.000 pounds, or 3.667,767 gross tons of 2,240 pounds, against 3,469,646 gross tons in the last six months of 1888. The increase in pig was wholly in the kinds used for general foundry and mill purposes. There was a decrease in the production of bessemer pig. The stocks of pig unsold on June 30 and not intended for consumption by the holders amounted to 502,934 gross tons, against 300,144 on Dec. 31. There was 288 furnaces in blast on June 30 and 298 out of blast.

Aftairs at Johnstown. JOHNSTOWN, July 24. — Treasurer Thompson is still busily engaged paying out money. Judge Cummin does not spend much time in his office, as he is sy getting things in shape for the next distribution. Little shanties are springing up where licensed houses tormerly stood and liquors are put on draught. Two boys on Washington street have fixed up a temporary bar and are playing saloon keeper like hardened old men. Their parents were drowned in the flood, the only legacy they left their children being the license certificate. The Red Cross society have taken charge of the distribution of clothing and furniture. For some days past large gangs of workmen have been taking out brick, and now there are great piles stored in different parts of the town. It is becoming a serious question what to do with them, but the proposition to give each person who owned a brick house as #### many as formerly will likely be adopted. A Bed-Quilt Trust Formed.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Two new trusts were announced yesterday. One is a bed-quilt trust, the two houses which practically control the manufacture of "comforters" having pooled their interests. The price of the quilts, it is said, will be advanced 25 per cent. The other is a free lunch trust. The Knickerbocker Bean company proposes to supply all the saloons in the city with the materials for lunches. The company is absorbing many of the "routes" of individuals who have been supplying the saloons in their vicinity, and in cases where the small fry refuse to make way for the big concern the latter threatens to supply the saloons at half the prices now prevailing, and thus drive the individual purveyors out of business

PROMPTED BY JEALOUSY.

STORIES THAT MRS. MACKEY WAS A FORMER LAUNDRY WOMAN DENIED.

The Millionaire's Wife on Her Way to America-Parnell Will Act With Mr. Gladstone on the Royal Grants Question-1600,000 Voted for Irish Railroads—The Tenants a Right to Or-

London, July 24.—The Pall Mall Gazette prints a long interview with a representative of Mrs. Mackey, who refutes the statement recently published that she was formerly a laundry woman, boarding Louse keeper, etc., and asserts that she was the daughter of an American army officer, who was highly educated, sparsing French and spanish fluently. The was married at the age of 16 years to a physician in San Francisco, who shortly afterward died, leaving her a competence. She married John Mackey when he was already in comfortable circumstances, but before he had acquired the methons he now passesses The current stories are prompted entirely by jealousy. Mrs. Mackey is going to America merely on a visit to per husband. Mrs. Mackey, with the Decastros of New York, sailed for America Tuesday.

Parcell on the Royal Grants.

The position which Mr. Parneil and his contingent of Irish Home Rulers in the house of commons are likely to assume toward the proposal to increase the allow, nees to members of the royal family is a subject for much speculation here. H. Parnell was interviewed and said that Mr. Sexton and himself were in this meet a influenced very largely by the great is pect they entertained for Mr. Glad-tone, whom they were anxious to support in all matters not affecting the wehave of Ireland. For his own part, Mr. Parnell says he has no strong feelings on this question, and his only concern is to make his action on the subject of the grants entirely hormonize with his ideas of autonomy and local selfgovernment. Viewing the matter in this light and considering the question as one of purely English polities, he naturally will throw his influence upon the side most acceptable to the people of England, and he is willing to accept Mr. Gladstone as the exponent of public opinion in England. He does not imagino that a solid Irish vote in favor of the grants will have the effect of alienating the sympathics of Irishmen in any quarter of the globe, for although it may be true that the Irish have not been reared to adore the Queen or the English royal family they are too sensible to insist that their prejudices should be allowed to stand in the way of Ireland's best interests. This whole business is, however, so entuely apart from his own main object in life—the improvement of the condition of Ireland—that he is entirely willing to be guided by his desire to co-operate with Mr. Gladstone, for whom the Irish are filled with a gratitude they can never repeat of, for his kindness to the Irish and his sacrifices

The Albany penitentiary has been designated as the place of imprisonment.

Getting Control of Gas Lands. CLEVELAND, July 25.-Cleveland opponents of the Standard Oil company in the Ohio oil and gas fields say that the big trust is certainly engaged in an effort to buy up a control of the natural gas lands of Ohio and Indiana. For natural gas lands on which leases could have been secured a short time ago at $2 or $3 an acre, $20 an acre has been paid by Standard representatives recently. Dr. Baxter, of Lima, is the owner of a large amount of territory in the Lima neighborhood, and he is one of the latest to sell out to the new combination. Dr. Baxter is now in the east with Col. Calvin S. Brice, who has of late become prominently identified with Standard affairs. This move on the part of the Standard was brought about by the decision of the city of Toledo with regard to its gas. After a great deal of trouble with the Standard the Toledo council deended to seeme lits own supply, but it is generally believed now that the decision came too Lite.

The President's Plans.

Washington, July 25.-Walker Blaine has received a letter from Private Secretary II. Lord giving the programme for the president's trip to Bar Harbor. The president, accompanied by Mr. Halford, and proparty Mrs. Harrison, will leave Washington for New York Aug. 6 or 7, with the chances in favor of the first date. At New York one of the Fall River steamers will be taken for Boston, the party arriving there the next morning. All that day will be spent in the city as quartly as possible. The president has expressed a wish that he be permitted to decline any public recep-tion. The following morning the party will leave by train for Bar Harbor, arriving there that evening. As the president has promised to attend the soldiers' monument ceremonies at Indianapolis on Aug. 22, he will spend only about ten days at Bar Harbor.

He was not prepared to say that this was a violation of the law, but individually he was firmly of the opinion that it was in violation of the spirit of the law. He thought that no one, unless he happened to be an active partisan, should be dismissed from the public service. He said that the commission was going to look the matter up, not only as relating to the present, but to the past. In speaking of the matter further, Mr. Roosevelt said that in the Baltimore postoffice it was charged that there had been a clean sweep, and out of 357 employes, there were now only eleven Republicans. He thought that this was wrong and ought to be stopped.

Decision in a Chinese Case:

Washington, July 25.—The attorney general has rendered a decision in the case of the twelve Chinese coolies who are detained at New Orleans. These coolies are on their way from Cuba to China and wish to proceed overland to San Francisco, where they expect to take a steamer. It is understood that the decision is the most important yet made concerning the construction of the Chinese exclusion act, as it is said to allow the coolies to proceed to San Francisco as tourists, thus establishing a precedent. Acting Secretary Patcheller, of the treasury department, to whom the attorney general has sent his decision, refuses to make the matter public, and states that he will turn it over to Secretary Windom when he returns to the city. The Southern Pacific Embroad company has been the chief mover in this particular case. The attorney general's report to the treasury department is in the rettine of an opinion. He cites as his belief that there is no nutbority 20 years, son of a wealthy tarmer. He contained in the Chinese exclusion law fired troe-bots from behind. It is said to prevent the twelve coolies proceeding through this country from one country to anchor in order to embar's for their native land at the latter place.

INGENIOUS REPORTERS.

THOSE OF CHICAGO ARE BOTH DETECTIVES AND JOURNALISTS.

They Have Unearthed Most That Is Known About the Cronin Case and Many Other Murders - Extraordinary Devices Employed-Disguised as Women or Priests.

[Special Correspondence.]

Washington, July 18.—The most successful detectives in this country are the newspaper reporters. In no other city have they done such good work in this line as in Chicago. The young giant of the west is the headquarters of sensational news in this country. It produces more murder mysteries, great crimes and interesting "cases" than the metropolis and all its surrounding cities combined. A look back but a few years calls to mind no end of great cases in Chicago. Besides the Anarchist affair, which was international in its bearings, scores of other crimes or mysteries have attracted attention throughout the country. There was the Joe Mackin election fraud case, which involved the election of a United States senator; the Wilson double murder at Winnetka; the trial and sentence to prison of McGarigle, McDonald and several county commissioners; the sensational escape of McGarigle to Canada, the midnight killing of millionaire Sneil the Eva Mitchell mystery, the Carter divorce case, and last, and perhaps greatest of all, the assassination of Dr. Cro-

It is a saying among the newspaper men of Chicago that they are no sooner out of one by thing than another is ready for them. And this is true. The Anarchist trials were no sooner over then the unfaithful public officials were brought to the bar of justice. These trials out of the way, the Anarchists were ready for the gallows. Then came the Snell killing and the shooting of millionaire Rawson, and after that the Carter divorce case. The very day the verdict in this case was brought in the body of Dr. Cronin was found in a sewer.

The successful Chicago reporter is more than a newspaper man-he is a detective, a coroner, a policeman; he is almost a judge. Sensational wheat corners and speculative panies which shake up the whole world are among hit easiest tasks. When men or women go to Chicago to commit suicide, as they often do, the Chicago reporter welcomes them with all proper hospitality and at-

In this Cronin case the reporters have discovered about all the evidence them is in the hands of the authorities. It was Galingher, of The Tribune, who disclosed the nature, source and significance of the bogus dispatches sent out from Toronto announcing Dr. Cronin's arrival there. It was another Tribune man, Sullivan, who gave to the public the facts about Alexander Sullivan's losses in the wheat market. It was Lederer, the Herald artist, who, by promptly and skillfully following up an accidental elew, discovered the scene of the cruel killing at the Carlson cottage. It was another Herald man who hunted among the hundreds of expressmen in the city till he found the one who drove the load of furniture to that bloody little house in the suburbs.

At every stage of this case the reporters have given the police more information than the police have given them, notwithstanding that all the advantages are on the side of the police. When a man has anything to tell he goes straight to the police with it. People are afraid to talk to newspaper men on such matters, because they dislike publicity.

When the police were at their wits' ends for a key to the mystery of the murder of millionaire Snell, a bright reporter worked out a clew which the police had overlooked, and found that the young good-for-nothing, Tascott, was the guilty person. Though not generally known, it is a fact that the newspapers of Chicago have spent thousands of dollars trying to catch Tascott, and in all probability have been closer to him than the police. A Chicago reporter is now en route for China on a justify the expectations of the newspaper which is paying his expenses.

What may be said to have been the Chicago was a similar trip abroad, made by a representative of The Daily News. The president of a Chicago savings bank had stolen a large sum of money and disappeared. The News reporter sharpwed him to Europe, found raim and its rviewed him. The News was then a young and struggling journal, and this feat materially helped it slong the Highway to success.

Not many monthsago a young woman, cott's brother. That newspapers are disshown in this case. A reporter spent two pened to know of a renegade clergyman months investigating a phase of the who lived far out on the West Side. Snell mystery which had been neglected, and obtained information which continued to wear the garb of a priest, would have created a great sensation if and spent his time in drinking saloons published. But as it was information which possibly could not be substantiated found this renegade and induced him to in court, the secret is locked in the go to the station house and take the conbreasts of a half dozen persons.

It was a Chicago reporter, Mr. Chapin, then of The Tribune, now of The Times, who performed the unprecedented feat of the brilliancy of the feat, from the decapturing the sole survivor of a great tective reporter point of view. steamship disaster and of running his prisoner away out of the reach of other newspaper men. A passenger steamer was lost near Milwaukee. At first it was supposed all on board had perished, but after the lapse of two days one man was picked up and taken ashore. Chapin chartered a tug and took this man to Milwaukee and thence to Chicago and his own home. It is perhaps superfluous to remark that the man was well cared for and thoroughly interviewed. The same Mr. Chapin was lucky enough to catch Mr. Garigle as he landed on Canadian soil. A dozen reporters were skirmishing all through Canada, but Chapin alone was lucky enough, or shrewd enough, to be at the right spot. When

Mr. Garigle jumped ashore the first man he saw was this Chicago reporter. When rich old Mr. Wilson and his wife were found beaten into jelly in their home at Winnetka, near Chicago, the police looked the ground over and concluded they had another first class mystery on their hands. While the police were running around looking for clews a reporter, this Mr. Chapin, found that Neal McKeague, a butcher of the village. had owed Mr. Wilson some money; that he had been the first to discover the bodies, but that he had returned to his shop without saying a word to anybody, served two or three customers, gone by train from Winnetka to Chicago, and called on several acquaintances there without once mentioning the terrible scene of blood his eyes had beheld a few hours before. Naturally concluding that McKeague must be the murderer, Chapin decided to confront his man with an accusation. Though well knowing that a man who could commit a crime like this and go about his business as if nothing had happened must be one of the most cruel and desperate of criminals, the reporter faced McKengue alone.

"He was the coolest villain I ever saw," says Mr. Chapin, who is now a Washington correspondent. "He sat on the meat block in his shop, whetting a big carver on his boot leg. I had on my overcoat, with my right hand in the outside pocket grasping a revolver.

" 'McKeague, I said, 'you killed Mr. and Mrs. Wilson,

"I expected to see him jump for me, with that knife aimed at my heart. Instead, he raised the carver, ran his thumb along the edge deliberately and without the quiver of a nerve, and an-

McKeague was arrested, tried and acquitted, though there never was much doubt of his guilt. He led a very wicked life after this, and was finally killed in a brawl out west.

When necessary the Chicago reporter will take desperate chances. He is not afraid to enter a nest of toughs nor to make midnight explorations of dark alleys in the slums. He often pretends to be an officer, and "flashing his star" is a reportorial amusement. Newspaper men who do police work wear stars under the lapels of their coats, the pieces of silver bearing the names of their papers. These stars are open sesame with the police at fires and on similar occasions. Little Charley Seymour, of The Herald, one of the most brilliant reporters in Chicago, has arrested and marched to the station house two or three men simply by momentarily exposing his star and saying, 'Come along with me," Seymour, Ehlert and McHugh, three reporters, were lucky enough to come upon a man whom they suspected of baving killed Eva Mitchell. They 'flashed their stars" on him, arrested him, took him to the station, locked him up in the "sweat box," and interviewed him to their hearts' content before the man suspected they were anything but officers of the law, and before the police knew what was going on in their own

While at work on this same case Reporter McHugh had a remarkable experience. A Spaniard who had his bed in the loft of the Chicago university, founded by Stephen A. Douglas, but now abandoned and vacant, was suspected of complicity in the murder. McHugh procured the murdered girl's dress and hat and carried them late one night to the university building.

Effecting an entrance by means of a window, he disrobed and put on the girl's rhythm and flowing line of the suave maid-Tascott mission, which may or may not clothing. Thus attired he groped his way up four or five flights of stairs to the attle, burst open the door of the Spaniard's room and stood before the man in beginning of reportorial enterprise in the habiliments of the dead. The effect was startling. Throwing up his hands in despair, the Spaniard called to Eva for mercy. No other proof of his guilt ] was obtained, however, and he was never arrested. WALTER WELLMAN.

MUSIC AND DRAMA. MISS EMMA EAMES.

The New American Prima Donna Who Recently Made Her Debut in Paris. The debut of Miss Emma Eames, the new American prima donua, has been literally the great event of the musical season in Paris this year, writes Theodore Child in Harper's Weekly. Within a few weeks her name has become famous, while her splendid voice and perfect method have established her artistic reputation on a basis of absolute solidity. Miss Eames is an artist who owes every thing to her art and to her will, and nothing to intrigue, influence or favoritism. The story of her life is as simple and radiant as the lady herself.

Miss Eames was born in Boston. Her mother, who is a distinguished amateur musician, was the first to discover that Emma was gifted with the rare treasure of a voice, and the first to train that voice with the care that it deserved. Then Mrs. Eames brought her daughter to Paris, and placed her in the hands of that distinguished teacher, Mme. Marchesi, in whose school she made very rapid progress. Thanks to her mother's intelligent care, her voice had never been deformed nor stramed; it had no "holes" in it, to use a professional familiar term; it needed only to be developed and brought out. After a period of study at Mmo. Marchesi's school Miss Eames, being ready to begin the great battle of her professional career, went to Brussels, hoping to make a debut at the Theater de la Monnaie. The opportunity did not present itself; several times Miss Eames might have made a debut in an understudy, but the eminent director of the Conservatoire of Brussels, M. Gevaert, dissuaded her. "You have a voice and talent," M. Gevaert used to say to her, to give you the first place in your profession; you must make your debut as a prima donna and not otherwise. If you begin as an understudy you will remain an under-

The next experience was an engagement at one hundred dollars a month at the Opera Comique at Paris. Month after month Miss Eames waited, learning now this opera and now that one, working all the time, and chafing with impatience, but no chance of singing was given her. Finally, after propositions had been made to her from the Grand Opera, by dint of perseverance, earnest argument and sheer power of will, Miss Eames obtained the canceling of her contract at the Opera Comique, and signed an engagement with the Grand Opera. which was kept secret until the moment of her debut. The circumstances of this debut are doubtless fresh in the memory of our readers. Patti had created at the Opera

Gounod's Romeo et Juliette, and sang the role for a short season. Then through protection and influence, a certain Mademoiselle Darclee sang the role of Juliette, but so badly that there was an outcry and a demand for a new Juliette. Then Miss Eames made her debut, one of the most completely triumphant that we have seen. The freshness and power of her voice were only equaled by the excellence of her method and the extreme sensitiveness of her acting. As for her beauty, there was but one opinion: here, indeed, was the ideal Juliette. The next morning the critics were all enthusiastic in their praise and Miss Eames was immediately adopted as a charming idol by the Parisian musical public. In Miss Eames there are two distinct personages, the woman and the artist. The artist belongs to the public and to the theater; the woman lives entirely aloof from the theater, and all that is connected with the stage and things stagy. Our picture shows the woman, tall, slender, proportioned with the lilial elegance of Watteau's figures, very supple and lithe in all her movements, having in her presence and in her walk something of the imposing ens who animate Botticelli's frescoes. The head, on the other hand, is quite modern, both in the features and in the vivacity of the expression; is a beautiful American head, fine, pure, and delicate in aspect, clean-cut like a cameo, and crowned with a wavy mass of crisp brown hair. Miss Eames' eyes are blue-gray; her complexion has the clearness and freshness of virginal youth; her expression, while full of will maiden who might repeat every morning Newspapers and newspaper men do the prayer that the ancients used to adnothing that is not agreeable, and say nothing that will give displeasure."

Miss Eames lives very modestly with her a phenomenon due to the inexperience of the debutance and to the smartness of the managers. Time, however, will soon modily this state of affairs. Miss Eames is about to make her second debut as Marguerile in "Faust." She will then sing "Sigurd," and next year she will create at Paris the role of Desdemona in Verdi's "Othello" In Miss Eames' silting-room are two photographs which sho pages very highly as souvenirs and landmarks in her young career. One is a photograph of the director of the Conservatoire of Brussels, with this inscription: "A Mile Eames, a qui il predit le plus bel avenir, son affectucusement devone. Geveert. Man, 1888 " The other is a photograph of the author of "Faust," with these words written upon it: "A ma charmante petite Junette Éames. Ch. Gouned, 13 Mars, 1-8h Debut a l'Opera.''

He did not think of again presenting "Dr.

Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," but he might do so.

Besides leading Shakespearean roles, he will produce two or three new pieces, one of which is by Robert Buchanan. He was not ready to tell their titles, however. In regard to his English experience, Mr. Mansfield said that it had been beyond all expectation satisfactory and successful, "Of course," he added, "there were some little incidents and accidents, amusing and otherwise, as, for instance, in the case of one of the performances of 'Richard III.,' when Mr. Irving was present, I was struck on the head with a sword by a standard-bearer who stood six feet two in his stockings. The man was pear-sighted. His sword cut through my wig and laid the scalp open to the bone, causing a stream of blood to run down over my face. At the moment the house seemed to think it a part of the programme, but when I did not respond to the call questions were asked, and after it became known that I was pretty badly hurt many stayed to inquire about my condition. "One of the most pleasant incidents of my stay in England occurred a short time before I came away at a dinner in Twickenham at the house of the Dowager Lady Freake. She and her family have always been enthusiastic patrons of the drama, and on this occasion, after making a neat little speech, she made me a present of a splendid pair of shoe buckles, which had belonged to Edmund Kean. She had lent them, sho said, at one time to E. A. Sothern to use in David Garrick,' but determined to give them to the actor who should please her best in a Shakespearean part. I am sorry my boxes are not here that I might show you the buckles."

Gladys Rankin occupied a box at the first production of "The Burglar" at the Madison Square Theater. Sidney Drew gazed at her so intently on several occasions during the performance that he forgot his lines.

Maurice Barrymore is engaged to A. M. have the choice of parts. If he doesn't like any of them, he doesn't have to play at all, now that Mr. Palmer has sold Captain Swift. Under the original agreement, Barrymore could take his choice between the leading part in any new piece that might be produced and playing Swift. Now he must either accept the "leads" at the Madison Square or walk around.

Miss Lizzie Evans has purchased all the one and three-act comedies brought to this country by Nat Behrens. She intends having them translated and produced in firstclass theaters only. They were each read carefully by a competent German translator, and pronounced to be brilliant and sparkling comedies. Miss Evans also purchased all the music that Mr. Behrens had on hand, and which is all new to America. It will be heard in the comedies. Ida Mulie, who is everywhere known as being a bright and clever actress and a fine vocalist, is at present playing the principal role in "Said Pasha," which was performed in New York by Helen Dangeon. Miss Mulle has given to the part a chic and spirit that were rather lacking before she took hold. Miss Mulle has not yet fully decided about going starring in her own play, "Little Miss Volney." She has so many good offers of salaried engagements that she is half inclined not to take chances all by herself at present.

Sunday night, July 14, "Bluebeard, Jr.," began its sixth week at the Chicago Opera-House. There is no evidence of a falling off in percentage. The new features introduced in the second edition have furnished an additional interest to the superb production. Mr. Braham should be congratulated upon his musicianly work in the latest version of the piece. "The Dude Brigade,"
"The Oriental Swell," "June Skies" and the 'Army So Grand," the two latter new solos sung by Miss Lily Post, have already become popular. The changes made by the comedians have been for the better. New members in the ballet have been well received. On Thursday night the fiftieth performance of the piece was given. Souvenirs were presented on that occasion.

Although the Best of Feeling Exists Between the President and His Premier. Too Much Red Tape in Making Purchases for the Navy-Army Officers Concocting a Scheme to Prevent Desertion-A New Coaling Station in Samoan Waters.

Washington, July 22.—The Sunday Herald, speaking of President Harrison's proposed visit to Bar Harbor and Secretary Blaine's probable resignation, says: "The president last Friday had under consideration certain matters connected with the department of state, but declined to act conclusively upon them before having a personal conference with Secretary Blaine. In answer to inquiries regarding a prospective date for that conference, he said he expected to meet Mr. Blaine about the middle of August. And in answer to further inquiries regarding the reports of Mr. Blaine's resignation, he said he had no definite information regarding Mr. Blaine's intentions in that respect. The conference did not relate to appointments or American politics, but entirely to foreign affairs, and the inference impressed upon the minds of the president's interviewers was that as regards Mr. Blaine the most cordial relations existed between him and his premier in matters relating to the latter's department. As regards Mr. Blaine's resignation no doubt exists in the minds of those best informed that he will give up his portfolio on or about the 1st of October proximo,'

The New Order of Purchase.

WASHINGTON, July 22.-A Sunday journal here says: "The new order of purchase which went into effect July 1 is not meeting with much favor with the disbursing officer of the navy. A paymaster who is now on duty at the navy vard, New York, relates the amount of red tape necessary to procure a single article on board ship. Suppose that a paper of tacks is wanted on board a United States ship on a foreign station, the following is the routine actually required under general order No. 48: Four requisitions are made out, which are signed as follows: Officer making the requisition, 4 times, captain, 8; paymaster, 8, and admiral, 4. Bids are sent out to five merchants, which are signed by the pay officer 5 times; merchants bidding, 5; acceptance of bid, paymaster, J Bills are then made out in quintuplicate and are signed by the captain 5 times: paymaster, 10; senior officer of the board of inspection, 5, and the person receiv ing the money, 5. A report is attached by the senior officer of the board of survey, in duplicate two signatures, and the officer who has made the requisition signs a receipt on the bill five times when it is complete, with sixty-two signatures. This is called simplification of methods and protecting the government by a so-called system of checks and balances. In view of all these unnecessary number of vouchers, it would seem the embodiment of good sense to return to the old system.

To Prevent Descritor. Washington, July 22.—Army officers are thinking of some way to prevent desertion which of late years seems to be on the increase. Sometime ago it was stated, upon what was deemed excellent authority, that President Harrison would issue a proclamation giving general amnesty to all descriers, such as was done when Gen. Grant was president in 1872. But up to this writing the order has not appeared, although Senator Plumb and others of its advocates have received assurance from the president that it will be done. To the averaging layman the issuing of such an order looks like putting a premium on desertion. But the promoters of this idea argue that there are thousands of young men in the west who enlisted under assumed names, and then, tiring of the service, deserted; that this fact still hangs over them and acts as a bar to their business prospects in the future for fear of some day being hauled up by the military authorities. In order to prevent possible re-enlistment of men who have deserted from the army three or four times, it is now proposed to adopt an old custom that formerly prevailed in the army. When a recruit now presents himself to the surgeons and is passed, the doctor will proceed to vaccinate him upon a certain portion of the body, which will, of course, be known to the army surgeons. Should this man desert the service and present himself at some recruiting rendezvous under an assumed name, is is done nearly every week, the fact that he is a deserter from the army will be clearly established. By the adoption

This new duty of Lieut. Marix's will continue until November, by which time it is hoped the report will be in such shape that it can readily be sent to congress the following month.

WASHINGTON, July 22 .- With a view to giving the members of the watch force of the treasury ample authority in cases of emergency the district commissioners have appointed all the watchmen special policemen. It frequently happens that the services of a policeman are badly needed about the department, and to avoid disputes which might other wise arise if arrests were made without receiving proper authority, this course has been deemed the wisest to pursue, Accordingly the chief watchman, Capt. H. A. Cobaugh, and his entire force of twenty-two men were commissioned and sworn in as policemen.

The Charleston's Commanding Officer. Washington, July 22. It is understool that Capt. J. Crittenden Watson, of the navy, now residing in San Francisco, will be the commanding officer of Charleston when she is finally accepted by the government. Word has been received from the contractors that the repairs which were necessitated from the first trial will be completed in about seven weeks, at which time the second official trial will take place. The Charleston never had a contractor's trial at sea, but was tested for speed and horse power tied up to the deck. The San Francisco, the other new steel craiser building on the Pacific coast, will be launched about Oct. 1. In the meanwhile the government penalty of $50 per day for every day the vessel is delayed is still being paid into the treasury by the Union Iron works, of San Francisco. and it is to their interest, from a financial point of view at least, to hurry up the work on the ship.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—There will be a vacancy on the 29th of next August in the corps of army chaplains, caused by the retirement of Post Chaplain Ceorge W. Collier, and there have already been filed at the war department 250 applications for this position.

Disastrous Storm. LANCASTER, O., July 22,-Saturday one of the most disastrous storms ever known in the Hocking-Valley culminated in the breaking of Sharp's dam at Sugar Grove, on the Hocking canal. The dam held in store a large body of water that supplied the lower levels of the canal The heavy rains had filled the reservoir to the banks, when suddenly the dam gave way and with a mighty roar the sea of water went out through the valley, taking with it every movable object. For twenty miles the soil is ploughed Trees, feuces, crops and hundreds of head of live stock have been swept away. No lives were lost, because the people had taken warning and because the houses are situated on the bluff that overlooks the valley. But the canal for miles is a wreck and thousands of feet of railroad track are washed away. At Athens the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore and Hocking Valley railroad tracks are carried away, and trains will be delayed several days. Roads and bridges are annihilated, and the whole valley for miles looks like a dry water course. Competent judges place the loss in the hundreds of thousands.

A Counterfeiter Arrested.

FRANKFORT. Ind., July 22.—John Wilhelm, a prominent young merchant of Forest, this county, was arrested on a charge of counterfeiting. For several weeks complaint has been made of the circulation of the "queer" in this locality, and recently Officers Bird and Thatcher, of this city, began an investigation. Concealed in Wilhelm's smoke house were found a half dozen sets of molds and numerous coins in quarters, halves and dollars. When arrested at his place of business a few hours later Wilhelm denied all knowledge, but when asked to explain his possession of the molds he weakened. Ten dollars of the bogus article were found in his pocket. Wilhelm is about 30 years old and highly connected, his father being one of the richest men in Clinton county. While the prisoner denies that others are concerned with him, he is doubtless but one of a gang operating through this section of the state.

Cut His Sister's Head Open.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 22,-James Marlowe attacked his half sister, Mrs. Esther Lyman, with an ax early this morning because she refueed to lend him some money. He cut her head open and then beat and kicked her so that she is not expected to live. He gave himself up to the police. Mrs. Lyman, who is white, married a negro recently, but does not live with him.

THE M'DOW VERDICT THE SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION AT CHARLESTON. ored man, 60 years old, shot two men

Dr. Vedder Says the Crowning Catastrophe of the City Came from Its Hall of Justice-Dr. Pinckney Says the Murderer Pollutes the Land and the Blood Stain Cannot be Obliterated Until it is Washed Out by the Blood of Him That

Charleston, S. C., July 22.-The Mc-Dow verdict was the subject of the discourses in most of the pulpits here Sunday. Dr. Vedder, at the old Hueguenof Protestant church, alluding to the verdiet, said: Our city, so long and so worthily the pride of those whose birthplace it is, or who have learned to love and call it home; never more dear than amid the calamities with which it was visited, no more worthy of honor than from the spirit with which they were borne, and the strength with which their desolations were repaired, had already passed into popular literature as the "City of Lisaster." When its crowning catastrophe came from its hall of justice, whether or not the judgment there rendered was technically warranted-and it was reached by some at least-of unimpeachable integrity; some, at least, who might have been mistaken—I think they were-but who would not knowingly be unjust or untrue, yet there cannot be a doubt that a very large and influential portion of our community, and well nigh our whole land, hold it to have been there demonstrated that Charleston holds nothing more cheap than human life; that truth has been stricken down in what should have been its very citadel; that one whose loss was a public calamity has been stealithly done to death under circumstances that sicken the heart which hears the recital of them, whilst the wanton and wortnless "slayer" goes forth not only unscathed of penalty, but applauded by some as a well-doer. This is the verdict of a very extended and outspoken public senti-

At Grace Episcopal church, the fashionable church of the city, the Rev. Dr. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney said: "Life is far too cheap in our land. It is sacrifiaed with a recklessness which would not be tolerated in England, or any other civilized land where God's law is known. The result of the recent trial in this city seems to fall very far short of any censure of homicide. It has failed to condemn crime, to vindi cate God's law or to protect human life against the murderous pistol. That a human life has been taken by violence is an acknowledged fact and the tribunals of justice have no word of censure for the deed. The slayer is restored to his place without condemnation of any sort. without fine, imprisonment or any legal disapproval of the wrong. The murderer pollutes the land beyond all other evil deeds and leaves an indelible stain in God's sight. Nor can this blood stain be obliterated until it is washed out with the blood of him that shed it.

"Mercy to the murderer is cruelty to the community. Every deed of violence, whether murder, or manslaughter, or mob law, becomes the seed of future crime unless repressed by the majesty of

Hobnobbing With the President.

DEER PARK, July 22. proposes to make a lengthy stayhere unless some unforseen circumstance should arise to call him back to Washington. On the trip from Washington the president invited the several newspaper representatives aboard to join him in his private car, after passing Washington junction. This courtesy was duly acknowledged and for over an hour the newspaper men enjoyed the hospitalities of the president and Mrs. Harrison. The president took occasion to assure his guests that he would be pleased to have themscall upon him at his cottage and he promised to furnish them with all legitimate information bearing upon public affairs that may arise during his sojourn here. He related numerous amusing incidents of his career since he entered the White House, showing that the president's official life is not altogether an unhappy one, and that he has a keen appreciation of wit and humor. Arrangements are making for a grand ball at the hotel in honor of the president and Mrs. Harrison.

Laid Out by the Strangler.

MILWAUKEE, July 22.—The Athletic Baseball park was the scene of a catchas-catch-can wrestling match Sunday afternoon between Evan Lewis, the strangler, and Charles Green, heavyweight champion of England. The strangler laid out the Englishman in three straight rounds, getting two points down in the first round in two minutes. In the second he worked one hour and three minutes to down the Englishman, and in the third he downed him in three minutes. Tom Connors and McMillan were Green and Lewis' seconds, respec-

Colored Man Drowned.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—A special to The Enquirer from Beach Haven, N. J., says Ellis Jacobs, colored, of Washington, D. C., was drowned there while bathing.

A DESPERATE CHARACTER.

A Colored Man, 60 Years Old, Shoots Two Men and Two Boys. Chicago, July 22.-Henry Nutt, a coland two boys Saturday night. During the day he had some words with Mrs. Moore, his boarding house keeper. When Ed. Johnson, her stepson, came home she complained of Nutt's conduct, and Johnson upbraided Nutt. Nutt drew his 44-caliber revolver and promptly opened fire. The first ball grazed Johnson's thigh and the second hit Thomas Watson, shattering the shin bone. Nutt then ran into the street and was pointed out to Officer Daniel Shea. The policeman gave chase, and Nutt turned and fired two shots in quick succession. The first missed the officer, but hit a little colored boy named Ira Mitchell under the left eye. The wound is not dangerous. The second shot also missed its mark, but was fired at such close quarters that the blaze from the mouth of the pistol burned the officer's eye-The bullet hit another boy about a block away. Nutt was not disposed to yield his liberty, and finding his weapon empty, began a terrific struggie with the officer, biting, scratching and kicking with all his might. He succeeded in getting the officer's thumb between his teeth, and it was not until the policoman pushed his own revolver down the negro's throat and told him he would kill him unless he became quiet that he finally concluded to submit. He was then taken to the station. An examination of Shea's thumb showed that it had been nearly severed from the hand,

Collecting Deserting Soldiers.

At Demiresch, near Adrianople, Russian agents are collecting the soldiers who desert from the Bulgarian army at different points along the frontier. The Russians pay them liberally, give them alluring promises of early employment and thus encourage desertions all over Bulgaria. Just what object the Russians seek to accomplish by this manceuvre is not quite clear, but that it is not dictated by a friendly feeling toward the government at present in power in Bulgaria is well understood in that country. The matter has been brought to the attention of the Bulgarian representative at St. Petersburg with instructions to request an explanation and will be made the subject of diplomatic negotiations.

Henry George Sails for Home.

Henry George sailed from Liverpool for New York on the Umbria Saturday, friends from London, Birmingham, Reading, Glasgow and other parts of the kingdom accompanying him on board the steamer to say their last farewells. The whole party were photographed on board just before the steamer left her dock. Mr. George addressed a crowded and enthusiastic gathering of his admirers in the Liverpool rotunda Friday, where he was ably seconded by Mr. William Lloyd Garrison, who also speke.

Another Manifesto. LONDON, July 22.-Messrs. Boulanger, Dillon and Rochefort were out yester iay in a manifesto to their fellow-country men, in which they denounce the calumnies of ministers, who, as they say, have themselves been convicted of peculations. They assert that the ministers have been making desperate attempts to exfort from army officers, former subordinates of Gen. Boulanger, charges of one sort or another against him, and that they are even now using the public funds to obtain against the general perjured testimony from jail birds and con-

The manifesto continues: They appealed to the penal code, but brought absolutely nothing against us. If they could have obtained the most trivial proof of misconduct on our part it is not likely that they would risk, as they are risking now, the prosecution of the assize court by negotiating with forgers to furnish evidence against us. It is to you, fellow-countrymen, that we appeal to judge between us and this gang of thieves. We await with serene confidence the sentence from which these bandits, who even now feel it coming, vainly endeavor to escape. Long live the honest republic.

That Cankerous Old Woman

Described in the nursery ball who "lived upon nothing but victuals and drink, and yet "would never be quiet," was undoubtedly troubled with chronic indi gestion. Her victuals, like those of many other elderly persons whose digestive powers have become impaired, didn't agree with her. This was before the era of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, or some one of her numerous friends and relatives would undoubtedly have persnaded her to try the great specific for dysdepsia, constipation and biliousness. This would have been a measure of self protection on their part, for she would soon have been cured and ceased to disturb her with her clamor. The most obstinate cases of indigestion, with its attendant heartburn, flatulence, constant uneasiness of the stomach and of the nerves, are completely overcome by this sovereign remedy. Chills and fever and bilious remittent, rheumatism and kidney troubles are also relieved by it.

Hunger is the Best Sauce.

As a rule a person who has a good appetite has good health. But how many there are who enjoy nothing they eat, and sit down to meals only as an unpleasant duty. Nature's antidotes for this condition are so happily combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla that it soon restores good digestion, creates an appetite, and renovates and vitalizes the blood so that the beneficial effect of good blood is imparted to the whole body. Truly hunger is the best sauce, and Hood's Sarsaparilla induces hunger.

Senatorial Convention.

The delegates from Stark and Carroll counties to the senatorial convertion will convene at Canton on Friday, acqua. 2d, to put in momination a candidate for senator in the Stark-Carroll district.

Chairman Committee Carroll County.

Chairman Committee Stark County.

There is nothing displeasing in the knowledge that Massillon's population is 11,787.

The selection of Russell delegates to the senatorial convention is one of the signs of the times. Mr. Russell is a candidate for the office of state senator, in the fullest sense of the word.

Massillon sent aid to Johnstown to relieve distress, not to advertise its charity. It is glad to read the acknowledgement of the Pittsburg Times as a voucher for its offices, not because its people felt hurt.

The rewards offered for the Hulligan murderers have not been paid. They ought to be paid. The surest way to have justice done to those who earned them is to find what individuals are responsible for the offer of prize money and publicly fix upon them reaponsibility for the breach of faith.

Speaking of the coming senatorial convertion and the candidates, the Carroll Free Press says:

"Mr. Russell is a number one man, and the nomination of either will secure the Republican majority of votes in Carroll county. If Stark will do as well by the candidate the next senator will be a Republican. If the convention deem it best for salers' wars, and the prosperity of the party Carroll can furnish a good | candidate.'

For the benefit of whom it may concern the following is reproduced from the Birmingham, Ala, Age-Herald: "The report from New Orleans that Governor Lowry has a little list | there are already too many mines of all the spectators at the Sullivan-Kilrain mill, including newspaper correspondents, is no doubt exaggerated. His excellency must know that the newspaper men were there under protest. As Poo Bah would say, it revolted them, but they did it. been a general superstition that the educational publishers have been making enormous profits and rolling in wealth. As a matter of fact, the business, which in all is probably not much above $5,000,000 for the whole country, is confined to at most about a hundred houses, of whom half a score or so do a handsome business, on which small profits aggregate considerable return. But the profit of educational publishing is really inadequate, and is not proportionate to the return of equal energy and brains in other lines of bus-

The Engineering News remarks. To the best of our knowledge, the state of Rhode Island has the most effective laws regarding the safety of its many dams and reservoirs, and the commissioner of dams of that state has done very good work in inspecting and reporting upon their condition?

It is quite as important in Ohio as in Rhode Island that the reservoirs and dams be carefully inspects ed every year. Probably half the cities in Ohio where water works are maintained have dams so located that should they break great demage would follow. It is no reflection on the construction of these artificial reservoirs to insist that the state side of the case. He says to his men, ought to have every one regularly examined.

The new law in Minnesota affirmed by the state attorney general as constitutional, prohibiting the publication of descriptions of hangings, is likely to cause trouble. A few days ago an execution took place, and all the prominent papers published accounts in order to get a test case before the United States supreme court. The editors want to know whether the liberty of the press is to be abrogated by legislation of this sort or not. The question of the propriety of such publications does not enter into this controversylic opinion and individual judgment.

Unable to silently pass by the bungling efforts of the Ohio Democracy, the New York Sun says:

the cause of Democracy can be advanced and the political prospects of the Democracy promoted, by a plan of campaign which will aim at securing a majority in the legislature through the sacrifice in advance of the state ticket. Mr. James E. Campbell, who has been named in country in payment for his labor. Secthe list of prospective candidates for governor, has repeatedly been quoted as declaring that even if the Democrats should fall short of electing their state ticket, they might confidently expect a legislature favorable to the return of a Democrat to Washington in the place of Henry B. Payne."

The Alliance Review is unnecessarily severe in commenting upon John McBride's address to the miners of Massillon. Mr. McBride did not advocate a national strike by any means, and THE INDEPENDENT has personal knowledge that he is opposed to such a proposition. He did suggest a solid, compact organization, through which a suspension of mining might be ordered, when the product exceeds the demand. When the mines of the country are working two and three days a week, and when the supply of coal is so far ahead of the market that operators sacrifice not only profit but cost price to get rid of it, it would seem that no plan which offers relief ought to be scorned without due consideration. At the present time we have retailers' wars, and wholeone district seems to be at the expense of a competing district. While natural gas and oil fuels are reducing the general demand, development of new coal territory goes on unceasingly in the face of the fact that and too many miners. It will be a happy day when a wiser policy than at present prevails keeps the miners busy and finds a market for their

Giving Arguments Advanced by Both Owners and Patrons.

Of all the perplexing questions that confront the miner to-day, this one is in many places the most prominent. It has been agitated for years, and in several states has even engaged the attention of our legislatures. Still with the itself and it seems will not down until it shall be finally and forever settled. hke all other matters where two parties are interested, it has two sides and per haps it might be well in our brief discuesion to consider some of the main points as presented by each side. I shall not attempt to make an exhaustive argument for, or against either side but only to consider, fairly and logically the claims made by each party. It is of course needless to state, that the centest is between the miner and the operator, or rather between labor and capital. Two opposing forces which it seems are always antagonistic to each other. To all appearances they are swern, and deadly enemies. This is apparent even to the most careless observer, but it certainly should not be so. Who is to blame for this state of affairs we will not attempt to say, but it is probable one as much as the other. At any rate sich should not be the case, and it would be much better for all concerned, if they would work harmoniously together. But now to our subject.

li then, the claims made by either are tailacious, it con the le sily demonstrated, and no injustice will be done, The side which is in the right can never be injured by a fair and open discussion.

First, then, the operator presents his

See here, I am giving y in employment; I have thousands of dollars invested in this business; I have great risks to run here is a chance that I may lose every cent I have, while you are sure of gets ting what you earn. You have wages every two weeks; the returns for your lab it come so often that you cannot possibly sustain any great toss. Now, I can, ib connection with my other business, also manage a supply store. I can furnish you with anything your family may require just as cheap as you can promre it elsewhere. You are, to a certain extent dependent on me and my bust ness for your livelihood. A prosperous store will tend to make the business more successful and your employment ernianent. It is therefore your duty to yourself as well as your employer, to patremize the company store,"

The foregoing statements show very bricfly the plan of reasoning pursued by the operator upon this question. His craims amount to just this, and, in fact, I I am using the very words of an operator that is a marter to be settled by pub- in this state as expressed to payself: "It is an absolute necessity to run a supply store as an adjunct to the coal business in a successful one. To prove the truth of his words, he showed me a contract whereby he was loading lump coal for sixty-five cents per ton when at the same time be was paying sixty-two and "A novel notion has made its ap- this small margin, together with what pearance and found champions and he realized on nut coal, he must pay all supporters in Ohio. They fancy that | the expenses of running the mine, ineluding day labor. "Why," said he, "if I did not run a store in connection with the mine I would not realize 3 per cent. on my investment."

Now for a few words as to the opposite

The miners claims briefly summed up appear as follows. First, that he shall receive the lawful currency of the ond that he has the underiable priviledge to spend the same wherever and for whatever he pleases. He says it is un-American to deprive him of these privileges. It is taking from him the liberties, which are freely granted every citizen of cur "epublic. Any American is extremely jealous of his rights and privileges, and it is but natural that he should resist any invasion upon them. Now we have not gone into details but have merely presented the leading points of argument from each side, and the question now in the fewest words possible amounts to just this: Granted first. that the statements as made by the op erator are strictly trutbful. Is it right, he should manage his business at the expense of his employes? Is it necessary to infringe upon the personal liberties of the miner in order to successfully operate a coal mine? Most decidedly no. If the facts of the case are just as represented the business is certainly in a most deplorable asked him to do so. condition. The question comes, what is the cause of this state of affairs? Our answer must be, it is owing wholly to an unhealthy competition between different coal companies. Each will endeavor to undersell the other, and make themselves good by enforcing a reduction in the niner's wages. The fact of the matter is just this, there are more mines than are required to supply the demands of the market, and one operator will seek to take advantage of another by underselling bim, and then saddle the expense upon the coal digger by forcing him to buy his goods of a "pluck me"

Of course the laws of our state say that the operator cannot enforce any such rules, but there are so many ways that self liable to the law, that it is, in many places, absolutely impossible to get work unless you will patronize the company store. We said that it was the fault of the operator that all these inequalities exist, but we will retract that, shoulde's of the miners, for the reason that they could regulate all such matters to their own satisfateion, if they would only adopt the proper methods. If the miners would refrain from quarrelling and bickering among themselves and be solidly united they could manage such affairs to suit themselves. Therefore, I say most emphatically, the miner can blame no one but himself for the many wrongs he suffers, and if he allows such things to exist it only serves him right

Al Carlisle, the enthussiastic fellow 'who nominated Johnathan Wallace,' was caught by an Akron Telegram reporter to whom he thus delivered himself: "The nomination of Campbell would mean a majority of 20,000 for 25,-000 for Foraker. Campbell represents a faction. His nomination would mean a inctional fight. He cannot stand upon our platform. He voted against the Morrison bill and against President utmost stubborness it continues to assert Cleveland in his vetoes, and voted for the Mills bill only on its final passage, under protest. He gave Powell no help, and in the last presidential campaign was given ten appointments. Not one of them was kept. He is a strong candidate for the nomination, but I think Neal will prove just as strong before the convention meets and unless Campbell is nominated on the first ballot he will not be nominated at all.

Bi thard, otherwise "Dick" Myers, as he was called in an enthusiastic card published Monday, booming him for anditor, got into town last night, and blushed like a peony when he read the good things that had been said about lana. However, when a reporter caught him, he was steadiast in his determinution not to be a candidate.

"I have made up my mind," sail he to cevote myself particularly to one political interest for the present, and when I say that I am actively working to secure the state senatorship for Clement Russell, of Massillon, you need not be tol I that I have no serious thought of getting a non ination for myself.

"Up in our end of the country we al made up our minds long ago that there was our man to nominate for state senat it, and that one Clement thussell, and I want the people of Carroll, county and the south-east end of Stark to come to the same conclusion. We must give to Mr. Russell with unanimity the nomination which we all acteed ought to have been his long ago. Mr. Russell must not turn his hand over in this matter. We insisted upon his becoming a candidate, and one so known as he ought not require any of the work done that is necessary to others.

"There has not been a political campaign since the birth of the Republican party, in which he has not use I every influence at his command, nor was there ever a material interest that he neglected The fact is we admire just the sort of firmness and integrity that he posthis, in all probability the last opportunity we shall ever have, to do him some bonor."

Miss Minnie Stansbury and her sister, Mrs. S. C. Davis, and little daughter, Pearl, have gone to Cleveland to visit their many friends and relatives. Miss Blanche Snell, of Wellington, Miss Ottilia Brown and Miss Martha Seifert have returned from Chicago, where they made a three weeks visit with friends and relatives.

The Rev. Joseph Hingely, of St. Paul, was in the city, and left yesterday with his wife's sister, Miss Jennie Wert, who will be absent some time.

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

EXPERIENCES IN CATHEDRAL TOWNS, AT VENICE,

And Then Up the Mountains of Switzerland, at Come, and Through the Simplon Pass.

HOTEL GRANDE BRETAGNE, } Bellacido, July 4, 1889.

We glanced out of our windows overlooking Lake Con o to see a fine new flag, bearing the stars and stripes, waving majestically in the breeze or this lovely morning, although our party are the only Americans in this hotel. At the other hotel the American flag is thrown out also. I do not yet know how many, if any, Americans are over there. However, I did not intend to write up the glorious Four h, and could not if 1 did,—but or some or the incidents or our In my last I gave you sanething in regard to the air in Rome. If you will go about the old parts of the city or the lower portions, you will not be at all lower portions, you will not be at all drifts. The rade requires eight and a surprised to find Roman feve; (which I half hours. We then took rail for Marsuppose is the same as lever produced [tigny, where we will spend Sunday, July anywhere, caused in the absence of ventilation and sewerage). Yet there are great improvements going on in the entire city. Many of the old massive buildings are being torn diwn and tine blocks of modern's inclures are taking taking the r places, the material in one old bunding being sufficient for two new ones to far as brick and stone are concerniid, as they cover the outside with plaster in unitation of stone. They are widening the streets where possible. Water is here more abundant, then, in any city within my knowledge, and it is properly used. The water in the Tib a is a villainous compound, but fortunately there is a good current. To give you an ides of the old binidings, jet me say that the walls are from three to five flet in thickness, four or tive stories high, with small windows.

The streets are from three to ten feet wide, so narrow that cabs or carts cannot enter. There are some in which two of them can pass with core. You are constantly hearing the drivers yell "ho, on!" meaning "took out". In many of these alleys the sun scarcely ever soines. If they had an Joshua who could command the sun to sand suff awhite some of them might enjoy a few of its parifying rays it is seeming to pass through many of them, but as I have intunated, there are in some localides passably line stree's. But how it is that so many v sit the large city of Italy and so few take sick is strange.

Now in regard to railway and hotel porters I was profisp sid to look up a them as human bleches, ready at all times to take advantage of a traceer. but up to t is time I have been agreea bly disappointed I was not long in finding out the difficulty. Most traveiers, are prone to reach a train just in time to jump on board, as though it had been made for their especial use, but upon their arrival find that many others are there and are occupying the sections in peace and quietaess. There is nothing for the late comer to do but fly ar und luggage back and lotth. somewhere and call for his baggagethe porier holding on for his pay Both are excited, neither understanding what the other is saying or wants. The whistle blows, the traveer hands out a francior perhaps two france, and thporter takes it, supposing it is nor himself starts to .o and the other calls out for his change. Both go to chattering to each other in an unknown linguage, and to the amusement of the comfortable passenger. There is a regular mon-key and parrot show going on. Away goes the train and the passenger commences to call the porter a scoundrel or something akin to it, and profests that he has been cheated. The way I avoid all this is to maist upon being at the depot from twenty to thirty minutes before train time, being as near first at the gate as possible, having the porter at my side, and telling him where I am going. Heknows the train, will head through where they will visit relatives for two the gates and to the class car I want, first or second, going up as near the engine as I can, an i get the best car poit is-get all in and fixed, take ont my half franc being sure to at ways provide myself with a number of them, and pass it over The porter tips his cap, away he goes, and no fuss. Then I look up the guard and show him my sections, and by instinct or something else, he understands I want that section held-he sees the magic franc, and if possible I am not disturbed. At Rome we visited St Peters, the Vatican, the Catacombs, Colosseum, and numerous other places of less note for five or six days. We then took train for Florance where we found the conditions somewhatsimilar to those of Rome, except that there we rode over the finest drive that I have ever seen, extending from six to seven miles. The cathedral there has been handsome on the outside, but is now blackened by age, so as to mar its former beauty very much. The inside is very plain, not worthy of note. As to the names whose memories are in some way perpetuated, the books record them and time and space would fail in correspondence of this kind.

The next place at which we halted was Venice. The cathedral here is in some respects wonderful. The walls and domes inside, that appear to be paintings: are all stained glass and mosaics. It wourld not be out of place, as it appears to me, to be called one of the world's wonders. The gondola rides on the Grand Canal are pleasant. Aside from this there is but little to distinguish it from the other cities named, in point of streets or other requisites that go in to make up a city Milan came next. This is the one city of all Italy that we have seen, whose steets, stores and buildings are pleasing to look upon, and clean and new. Business seemed to be very active, and the people alive and had a wide awake appearance. The cathedral takes the prize for its marvellous beauty, nothing that we have yet seen approaches it in point of elabors teness. It is one immense mass of carvings, from street to topmost spire. The inside is massive, but not to be compared with St. Peters, in Rome. St. Peter's for dazzling splendor on the inside, leads everything that we have new ones.

MARTIGNY, July 6 We left Bellagio on Friday, and reached this city after the most exciting ride of my life, which was through the Simplon pass. When going down or the northern side of the road, which, by the way, is macadamized and smooth, the descent is very rapid, the horses going on a keen trot, the curves in the road short and sharp. If by some accident an axle should break, a wheel come cii or a horse tall, we would be almost certain to go over precipice, and down thousands of fect, seemingly perpendic ular, and with notle to impede the descent to the bottom-if there was anything left but kindling wood to go then As for passengers, I will leave that for others to contemplate.

I wish to say that our party enjoled the stay at Lake Como very much, The mountain scenery is very fine, and if time permitted we would have stud much longer. The change from sunny halv to the snow copped mountains of the Simplon pass is very marked. Mr. Hunt and myselt wearing our evercoats while riding in the stage. We were several temes within a few feet of snow So you see we are out from under the bright sky of Italy, and have entered the world renowned mountains and lakes of Switz mand, and in bidding larewell to Italy I most say that the traveller is abundartly rewarded for all is time traveling and expenses if he appreciates the massive buildings, the triumpls of sculpture, painting and architectore innel to the sublane land scapes presented by take, mountain and plain. #### ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

DEVOTED TO HORTICULTURE IN ALL ITS BRANCHES.

The Cultivation of Water Lilies in Artificial Basins and Tubs-A Variety Remarkable for the Brilliancy of Its Flowers and Size of Its Leaves.

soil, to the level of the surrounding surface, several tubs (oil barrels sawed in two will answer) quite close to each other in a group and tiling in the space around the tubs with plants of a semi-tropical nature. Such plants as calla lilies, tuberous rooted begonias, caladiums, ferns grasses, etc., may thus be grown Fill the tubs until about half full with a mixture of good loam and thoroughly rotted cow manure, in equal parts, and in this imbed the roots and cover the soil with about an inch of clear sand. Fill the tubs with rain water, occasionally supplying more to replace the loss from evaporation In order to aid in keeping the water sweet and fresh it is advisable to place in it sluck weed or any other small water plant and some minnows, until the lilies are established.

A QUIEN AMONG WATER LILIES.

For the larger growing tropical species and in order to cultivate successfuly a number of kinds it will be much better to construct a tank or basin. Twenty by thirty feet and about two feet deep will make a magnificent pool, but the size may be reduced in accordance with the limits of the lawn or desires of the owner. It may be built of either brick rough stone, cobble stone or old brickbats, and grouted with cement.

The subject of the illustration, Nymphæa Devoniensis, is, according to Orchard and Garden, from which the above is reproduced, a queen among the water lilies, "surpassing in brilliancy of flower, if not in size of leaf, the famous Victoria regia." It is one of the night blooming species, opening its flowers at night, beginning about 8 o'clock and remaining expanded until about 10 the next morning, each flower opening three nights in succession. The flowers stand on vigorous footstalks above the surface of the water, of a rosy red color and with bright scarlet stamens The leaves are of a handsome rich green, blotched occasionally with brown, and have serrated edges. The tubers should not be planted until the water is wariu

The larger growing lilies, including N. Devomensis, require plenty of room in which to attain their greatest size and perfection The wild nymphæa, according to the authority quoted, succeeds, however, in the tubs described.

Celery Plants.

"We tried years ago the plan of shearing off the tops off celery plants in the beds to save transplanting, but we don't like it." says the editor of Orchard and

Transplanted plants, in our experience, always make better celery and transplant to their final quarters with greater ease and certainty. As soon as the seedlings are large enough to handle we nip off the long tap root one third or more and dibble them into a rich bed about two or three inches apart each way. We generally use an empty cold frame for this purpose, so that we can lay over them a screen of laths as a protection from the hot sun. If you have not raised any plants now is the time to buy them. Those who raise celery plants in large quantities for sale can always afford to sell them, when thinning and transplanting, for half or less than half what the same plants will be worth at final transplanting time. Get the plants through as soon as possible and put them in the bed as directed until planting time, which in the middle states, where celery is grown only for winter use, should not be sooner than July 15, and in Virginia not before August

Destroying Auts on Fruit Trees. In reply to a correspondent whose pear trees have been infested with black ants two sensons in succession, Vick gives the following advice-

Some strips or page; wound around the trunks of the trees, and tied on, and kept smeared with molasses all around would prevent the ants passing up into the trees. From the fact that only certain trees are troubled in this way, it is probable that the ants have their home near those trees. Ricy should be caught and destroyed. Meat bones will attract them in numbers, and occasionally the bones can be picked up and dropped quickly into a pail of hot water Pieces of coarse sponge with sugar in the cavities can be used in the same manner. Take some vials of sweet oil, nearly full, and sink them in the ground to the rim. The ants like the oil, and will go and sip it. But it has the effect to clog the breathing apparatus of the insects and thus destroys them. By following up these methods for a short time the infested ground can be cleared of the

TO CIRCUMVENT CUT WORMS.

Popular Methods Resorted to by Farmers and Horticulturists.

Farmers have reported success with making hog pastures of infested fields, also by turning chickens into infested gardens

Numbered with the most effective artificial remedies is finding the hiding places of the worms and killing them. On grounds of limited extent a fine ef- | It has been recommended to set pegs at fect may be produced by sinking in the intervals to the tire of a light wheel and roll this over the ground near the hills of corn or other plants. It will leave a series of sin rai holes, in which the worms will take retuge. The next morning they may be willed by the same implement. Some use a stick for the purpose, but the wheel does more expedi-

Fruit trees, grape vines, etc., are bandaged to protect them from cut worms In localities where loss from these worms is apprehended, it is a wise precaution to use an abundance or seed, so that a good stand may be left after they have done their mischievous work. The old rule, familiar doubtless, to many readers, is to seed so thickly as to pro-

One for the black or there for the crow, Two for the cut was rand three to grow

When the number of plants to be protected is not too great. that covering the stems above and below the surface of the soil by a furnel shaped fold of paper or tin is an effective protection. This practice is however, too troublesome and expensive to be practiced on large areas. Another effective plan is that of placing bunches of grass or leaves previously dipped in a solution of Paris green between the rows of watermelon hills to be protected. The worms, by feeding on this poisoned grass, make way with themselves

Items About Melons.

Nothing so promotes the growth of a melon vine as the drawing of fresh earth to the stem, and a vine planted a few inches lower than the general surface of the soil, by a gradual drawing in of the soil by the time cultivation ceases can be on quite a ridge, and thus get the advantage of the hill with the further advantage of having its roots in moister and cooler soil than would have been possible if planted on a ridge. These remarks will apply equally well to watermeions as muskmeions In growing melons for home use quality is the first consideration. Of late years the effort among seedsmen has been to produce a watermelon with a tough rind, adapted to the long shipment from the south. This has been obtained or stone. The bottom may be laid with at the expense of quality. In our home garden it is of no sort of advantage to raise a watermelon which will support a weight of half a ton, as some are said to do. Neither do we care for its being "iron clad" or "copper fastened," unless the inside is well worthy of such protection. The newer sorts of watermelons, while they have been improved for the purposes of the shipper, have not been of the average quality of some of the older sorts. We have found none superior for this region to the Gypsy and the Mountain Sweet, says a Virginia correspondent in Garden and Forest. In muskmelons it is also a good rule to select varieties, not by size and looks, but by their quality for the table. In muskmelons size is often attained at the expense of quality. Early fruitfulness is prevented by nipping off the tips of the vines when about three feet long.

When to Pick Small Fruits

Pick small fruits in the cool of the day is the advice of Farm Journal. After they are picked keep them out of currents of air as much as possible. Don't ventilate the crates or baskets too much If truits are packed when cool and dry they will keep better in tight packages. The dealer who has a lot of stale berries on hand knows how to make them look fresh by dumping the baskets, so that those that have been at the bottom, away from the air, will come up fresh and bright at the top. Let us learn a lesson from this and not ventilate too much.

Things Worth Knowing.

An authority says that the gladiolus in our climate will not perfect itself in hot weather, and the only way to secure its full measure of beauty is to plant from the 1st to the 15th of July

Toads are recommended as a remedy for the flea beetle

A method in vogue among London market gardeners is thus described in Gardening Illustrated The soft outer leaves are folded carefully around the heart or center of the plant, and the whole is bound firmly with a withe or piece of bast. The center being protected 27, 28 from the weather, the caubages heart sooner by two or three weeks than they otherwise would do, and they are much more easily legisled in gathering and packing for market

The Buhach, in some localities, stands amongst the most approved of newer strawbernes, is a strong glower, good bearer and a large hands me berry, but in others it is quite poor in flavor, while in others it is succeeding admirably as a market variety

The Massachusetts | experiment station | says in a bulletin sent out on pears. Bartlett, Anjou Lawrence Literative and Louise Bonne bore the most fruit Kieffer tailed to make the rapid growth credited to it, and he Conn was blighted, notwithstanding the claim that it was blight proof Lawson and Early Harvest are believed to be synonymous, and the latter is entire! worthless

An Indiana fruit grower tells that among the watermelons he has found none bettor than the Honey melon "leing is no better if as good as Honey and in vigor and productiveness inferior to it The flesh of Honey is of a yellow color, rather firm, yet remarkably sweet and delicious, with seed but little larger those of the Apple. A King's Ears.

One night shortly before the taking of Maillezais, while d'Aubigne, as was apparently his custom, was sleeping with M. de la Force in a room opening out of Henry's bedroom, he said to his companion, "La Force, our master is a skinflint and the most ungrateful man on the face of the earth." La Force, who was half asleep, did not hear, and muttered, "What do you say, d'Aubigne?" upon which the king, who was noted for his quickness of hearing, quietly said, "He says I am a skinflint and the most ungrateful man on the face of the earth," D'Aubigne felt rather sheepish, but Henry was not in the least annoyed. The story is unfortunately not quite authentie, for it is only given in the notes of the early editions of the memoirs and does not appear in the manuscript. But in his history d'Aubigno relates a similar story in which when his bedfellow did not hear his remark, the king chimed in with "How deaf you are: don't you hear that he says I want to marry my sister to several brothers-in-law at once?" "Go to sleep," coolly replied d'Aubigne, "we have plenty more things to say about vou."—Macmillan's Magazine.

To eradicate these poisons from the system and save yourself a spell of malarial, typhoid or bilious fever, and to keep the liver, kidneys and lungs in a healthy and vigorous condition, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It arouses all the excretory organs into activity, thereby cleansing and purifying the system, freeing it from all manner of blood-poisons, no matter from what cause they have arisen. All diseases originating from a torpid or deranged liver, or from impure blood, yield to its wonderful curative properties. It regulates the stomach and bowels, promotes the appetite and digestion, and cures Dyspepsia, "Liver Complant," and Chronic Diarrhea. Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands and Tumors disappear under its use.

AN ARTISTIC EVOLUTION.

THE SUNBEAM HARNESSED TO THE PRINTING PRESS.

Waxed Paper Negatives-The Father of Modern Practical Photography - "Veteran" Roche, a Typical Inventor-Photo-Mechanical Printing.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, July 18.—The great defect of M. Daguerre's invention was that the images produced by it could not be multiplied except by repetition, as many times as copies were desired, of the costly and tedious original process. The fact was clearly apprehended by scientific and practical men that he had but opened the way to a field of infinite possibilities. It was not yet enough that the sunbeam should be imprisoned in the camera; it must be harnessed to the printing press. A creditable attempt in that direction was made by Sir W. R. Grove, who, not long after the invention of the daguerreotype, discovered a means of etching it in the plate, with acid, to a sufficient depth to enable-with very delicate manipulation-printing from it, but his process was merely an ingenious and expensive curiosity, a failure for all practical purposes. The steps were slow by which the present perfection of the art was reached.

Mungo Paton, in 1830, discovered the sensitiveness of bi-chromate of potash to light. In 1841, Fox-Talbot, of England, did the first real photography by what he denominated the "calotype" process, but in what would now seem a very crude way. He made his negatives upon paper, which was subsequently waxed and rubbed with a hot iron to render it semi-transparent. Then he made his positives upon paper over which had been floated albumen charged with iodide of silver. That process, or a very close approximation to it, by the way, is still in use in Paris for the making of magic lantern "slides," an art in which we now excel.

Louis Alphonse Pointevin in 1855. made the great improvement of employing for negatives plates of glass coated with "gelatine or other organic matter in combination with the bi-chromate of potash or of ammonia." From this point really have sprung all the many ingenious, and for their respective uses enormously valuable, processes of producing photo-relief, photo-lithographic and other plates for various sorts of printing. Volumes would be required to recapitulate the improvements and variations that have been made since Pointevm's time—in all civilized countries, but principally in the United States -but all rest directly upon his invention as a base, and Pointevin as the father of modern photography is hardly less worthy of honor in remembrance than Daguerre. It is true that in 1847 Niepce de St. Victor used iodized albumen on glass sensitized with nitrate of silver with fairly good results; also that Scott-Archer, of England, in 1851 brought collodion-which had then recently been invented for surgical uses by Le Greyinto use, but neither of them reached the point of practicality attained by Pointevin with gelatine. M. Pierre Ignace Alexis Gaudin in 1853 introduced a collodion emulsion the formula of which did not get into general use, but served as the basis for a number of improvements a little later and was employed for several years thereafter. In 1861 he made a gelatine emulsion and called it "photogene."

Not long after Pointevin's discovery Paul Pretsch, of Vienna, found that if he coated a plate of glass with bichromatized gelatine to a thickness three or four times as great as that employed by Pointevin, and when it was dry exposed it in contact with a photographic live negative, the gelatine where the light acted upon it was rendered insoluble and hard, while from the other parts, where the light had not acted, the bi-chromate could readily be washed out, and the gelatine there would absorb water and swell up just in proportion as it had been protected from the light, giving a pertect matrix from which plaster casts or electrotypes could be made. So delicate but sure was the action of the light that half tones were preserved and the reproduction of accurate printed copies of the original seemed to be, theoretically at least, merely a matter of color and impression. In practice, however, it was found that there was a great deal of improvement still necessary before the process could be made commercially valuable. One of the moderately successful methods fried was that of coating metal plates with asphaltum, which hardened under the light and could be removed readily by solvents from the unexposed garts, thus presenting a surface for etching. Lined and stippled work could be well reproduced in that way, but the usefulness of the process was limited.

Pointevin produced some good work by coating his glass plates thinly with gelatine and printing from them as from hthographic stones, the parts exposed to light taking ink, while those not exposed would absorb water and so repel the ink. That method was greatly improved by Albert of Munich, mainly in the inks and foll is he employed, however, and his process—named after him-is still the most perfect for execumnly fine photo-mechanical work, but with the diamback that it is slow and costly Obernetter and Edwards also made improvenants. When news of what was denog in this direction abroad reached New York, Mr. T. C. Reche-familiarly, admiringly and affectionately known to nearly every photo_) dier in the United States and pretty much all over the world as "the Veteran and "Daddy Roche, set to work experimenting. He tried to get some such ink as was used abroad, and the price demanded for it was $48 per pound, quite beyond his means. When he recovered his breath he went away and began at the beginning by making is own ink.

After a long series of experiments he titled upon copper plates as the best for ge week and at the next convention of notographers exhibited a pile of photographs printed from such plates, in such perfect reproduction of superb originals produced by sun printing that their character was not recognized until he explained it. Then it made a sensation. He had beaten Europe. His process is still used by the United States government and by commercial houses who own it in Boston and Chicago, but, like all his numerous and important inventions, it netted him scarcely anything. The great hearted and liberal firm of ink dealers, who charged him $48 per pound for the imported ink, offered him $25 for the formula by which he produced better inks than the imported.

This matter of photo-mechanical printing is, however, leading us away from our historical resume of the progress of development of photography as a picture making art, into what, though only one of the branches of its application, is nevertheless a very wide field. To return to the main thread.

The collodion process held its own for all photographic work as late as 1871 and is still used with better results than any other for the making of such solid black and white negatives as are used by photoengravers, tin types, and certain other specific applications, but in the year mentioned Dr. R. L. Maddox brought out in England dry plates coated with gelatine combined with bromide of silver. They were by no means perfect, but their desirability was at once manifest and incited many experimenters to seek improvements upon them. Mr. Burgess, of Peckham, R. Kennett and Charles Bennett-the latter as late as 1879-80-made the chief improvements in the direction of increasing the sensitiveness of the dry plates, in which such success has been eventually attained that now an exposure for the infinitesimal part of a second is as effective as that of half a minute was less than a decade ago. Now dry plates are universally used for portraiture, landscapes, "instantaneous" views, etc.

When the sensitiveness of the dry plates had been perfected in 1880, they were still defective in the very important particular that they would not stand the heat of our climate. At a temperature of 85 degs, their gelatine was liable to "frill," "blister" and even melt quite off the plate, so that it was necessary in summer to keep them cool with ice. T. C. Roche, after a long and disheartening series of experiments, finally by sheer accident hit upon a gelatine coating that could not be melted off with boiling water or even by the heat of a Bunsen burner, and his discovery is in general use today, without any more benefit to him than any other of his many inventions from which others have reaped great fortunes and he nothing. About the same time that he made this important discovery, or perhaps a little before. Mr. Roche conceived the idea of applying to paper for contact printing or exposing in the solar camera a gelatine emulsion similar to that employed in coating the dry plates. This was for enlargements for crayon work. He was so successful that he produced a paper so sensitive that it could not be used in the solar camera, and had to be worked by artificial light to keep it under control.

Before a large number of photographers assembled in the Cooper Institute he made pictures upon it by the flash of a pinch of gun cotton. The English "pla- help it. Born in him. Bred in him. tinotype" paper, invented by Mr. Willis, was already in existence, and was acknowledged as giving very fine results, but it was slow, required the use of the solar camera (a very costly instrument) and could not be used on dull days. Mr. Roche's discovery did away with the solar camera altogether, and with his paper the work of enlargement could be done in a cellar by candle light. The importance of it may easily be imagined. But that invention, like all the rest, was clutched from the old man, who is the typical inventor par excellence in his inability to look out for his own interests.

T. C. Roche has had more valuable patents in photography taken out in his name than any other man in the United States, and has freely given away more discoveries than any other. Indeed, it would be correct to say that he has given away all that his rare genius and ability have attained, and others have become wealthy on them while he has grown old and poor in all but the regard in which he is held by the photographic

It is worthy of mention as a remarkable fact that in all the United States and Great Britain not an inch of paper is made fit for photographic uses. The world's supply comes altogether from France and Germany and commands a high price. This is something for our many American paper makers to chew upon and repreach themselves for It is not apparent why they should not make quite as good a paper of any specific kind as can be produced in Europe. And another fact that goes with it is that only the finest French and Swiss gelatine can be used. Not an ounce that is suitable for the uses of the manufacturer of photographic material is produced in the United States. Cannot some of the big barons of Slaughter, out in Chicago, take this hint for the utilization in most profitable fashion of material, that, they have in excess and so start another "infant industry" that will very promptly stand upon its own feet?

It is hardly worth while to more than recall the horde of various "types" that were brought out in the early days of photography. Pretty much every able anglers in streams man hasn't been photographer got up some novelty of his own under a peculiar name, for which he, of course, claimed superiority over all others, and very often the same process had different games in different crowds. Spinsters look on Gallantry

Thus "ambiotypes," 'ivorytypes," "hallotypes," melaniotypes," "ferrotypes," etc., came into popular knowledge. They were generally returns daguerreotype, in that they were singly produced and not photographic prints them for better of worse. Generally from negatives, and while the processes worse. Still some compensation in povfor their production differed in details, the general principle was the same, of under developed negatives converted into positives by opaque backing.

There are now not less than 7,000 prefessional photographers in the United States engaged in and dependent mainly upon portrait taking as a business. This is, indeed, deemed a low estimate by some of the dealers in supplies, who presumably have a right to a somewhat authoritative opinion. Then there are about 5,500 engaged in the various processes of photo-mechanical printing, or the preparation of plates and blocks, by photographic aid, for printing, and it is rather singular that so distinct are now those two branches of photography that it is rare to find a person expert in one who is of the slightest service in the other.

In closing this review of the art of sun picture making, merely by the salient points in its history, which is all that space will permit, and bringing it down to the present time, it seems well to present a condensed table of the great steps in progress, showing the advance that has been made in reduction of time of exposure:

The work at our country mines is dull at present. We have three mines here and at present there are only five men employed, the one is operated by Stuck, Harbuck & Co., this vein is four feet thick and in the center is twelve inches of stone. This coal is mined at seventy-five cents per ton and nothing is paid for rooms nor breakthrough, and they push their coal and eage it. This is the way men work here. They are afraid to say one word for fear of being discharged. If men had the backbone to stand up for their rights, they could get one dollar more per ton, which it is worth. I am told by the men, that they do not earn one dellar per day, and then powder and all is to come off that.

The other mine is operated by Peter fosson, this vein is four feet of good coal. Here the men are paid by the car. and two of these cars weigh a ton, and they get twenty-five per car and this is at the rate of lity cents per ton. When asked why they do not ask for the price, they say, if we do the operators will shut with and we will storve. I would rather there to death doing nothing than to starge working myself to death for nothing. If the rest of the miners had the same opinion as I, they would tell the company to mine their own coal or pay the price, and go to where they pay it. MINER.

CHARLES DAVIS WINS HIS LWAGER

That He Could Run to CantoniniOne Hour-Other Sporting Notes.

Extraordinary interest has been created in the running qualities of various of the local amateurs, by the success of Charles Davis, who ran from the Hotel Conrad in Massillon to the Hurford House in Canton, in fifty eight minutes. Saturday night, on a wager that he could cover the eight miles in one hour, Davis backed himself for twenty-five dollars against Dr. C. F. Porter, and gave occasion for innumerable side bets, azgregating several hundred dollars. The gave Lawrence a calt Saturday and "got notice in the Saturday issue helmid to to draw a big crowd that saw the 🗨 nog man start, followed by many carrees and bievelists. C. W. Russell kept time. accompanying the runner to Canton.

Davis started on a wak, but soon broke into a jog, and kept -it-up the entire distance. He arrived at the halfway house in twenty--ix minutes. At Capton's thousand or more people had gathered to see the finish, and as Davis, attired in a pink flannel shirt, knee breeches and running shoes, ran lightly up Tuscarawas street, and reached the notel with two minutes to spare, he was received with a vigorous cheer by the Cantonians.

Davis is the young fellow who so closely held George Bonan in the recent armory match, and who challenged him through THE INDEPENDENT last week to t four hour go-as-you-please. He is slightly built, long in limb, and has bright eyes and a decidedly vigorous George Rutter, the man who engaged t• reach Canton in sixty minutes for ten dollars, started as the town clock struck 7. He moved off at such a lively rate 🏞 t few believed that he would be successial. But he plackily stack to his work, and though he failed, the timekeeper announced that it was only by two minutes and eight seconds. At Canton he was expected and the multitude received bim with enthusiasm.

Rutter protested against the payment of the wager over to the winning side this morning, on the ground that he had been fouled, but it was not so held.

George Bohan, winner of the armory go as-you-please and Charles Davis, who reached Canton in 58 minutes, met in the office of The Independent last night and posted a forfeit of $10 as a guaran tee of their willingness to enter a four hour go as-you-please race, to take place in the armory next Saturday night, for a prize of $100, and the entire gate re-

The Canton Repository gives the Massillonian and his trainer who made the Monday night race a severe reprimand the rubbing down process after the finish.

It was stated about town that Mrs Baker, who participated in the recent female pedestrian match would undertake to run to Canton, too, but no such affair has yet been arranged.

George Rutter protested so violeatly against giving up his money for the Monday night race, that Dr. Porter restored it to him. Rutter claims teat he was persistently "dusted" by carriages, and that the timekeeper could not see him when he reached Canton. The other side claims that there was nothing unfair about the event.
